Dear Hiring Manager,

I am writing to submit my application for an associate veterinarian position. I have an interest in just about everything, which I think aligns with the multi-faceted nature of veterinary medicine. I believe I am a well-rounded individual who embraces all aspects of the profession, from client communication to hands-on patient care. I bring enthusiasm, efficiency, and creativity to everything I do. I am always looking to meet the needs of my patients and clients. Currently, I'm practicing at a small animal clinic in Prince George, British Columbia. However, over the past few years, I've spent time in Calgary and have fallen in love with not only the city, but the variety of professional opportunities it offers. The diversity is very appealing to me and I'm excited by the potential to grow both personally and professionally within such an environment.

I have grown up around veterinary medicine with my dad being a mixed animal veterinarian for over 50 years and have volunteered/worked at other practices throughout vet school. I was raised on a family farm where I learned the qualities of having a good work ethic, being efficient, and the importance of having a strong foundation in all aspects of life in order to be successful. Through my experiences, I was shaped into a person who I believe understands the industry, but also someone who is highly adaptable, which I believe is necessary to survive in this industry. I have provided services to many underserved communities which has shown me first-hand how important preventative health is, especially when you have limited resources. The veterinarians in my life have also taught me how important it is to build strong, trusting relationships with clients, and to tailor these relationships to the needs of the client. Clients can have different goals depending on their financial constraints and the type of relationship they have with their pet, and I am happy to work with people from various socioeconomic groups.

As an associate veterinarian I am looking for a clinic that is welcoming and supportive, where everyone works as a team towards a common goal. I am very eager to be a part of a clinic where I can grow as a veterinarian .

For the reasons listed above I believe I would be an excellent candidate and compliment your clinic very well. I am passionate about preventative health care and my goal as a veterinarian is to provide comprehensive care to all. Thank you for taking the time to review my application and I hope to discuss this opportunity further in an interview.

Sincerely,

Jasmine Vogel
